THREE NEW CAUSES OF ACTION? A STUDY OF THE FAMILY RELATIONSHIP

family relationship would necessarily involve acceptance of these two analogous causes of action if the law is to be established in an orderly manner. The creation of this trio of new causes of action would therefore result in a number of cross-relationships within each family, all of which would be protected by the courts against both negligent and intentional invasion. It is submited that despite the seeming tendency of our law to encompass and protect larger areas of interest, the practical considerations involved are too great to merit the establishment of these causes of action at the present time.
